[2] [3] Some matters now set limits for transactions and transactions for which payment is not used to be legally used. [4] History The tendency for the use of non-cash and liquidation in the daily life began during the 1990s when the electron bank became common. In 2010, all digital payment was widespread in many matters, with examples including intermediates such as PayPal, digital wallet systems such as Apple Pay, Contact Payments and NFC by electron or smartphone card, and electronics and banks, all in widespread use. [3] At this point the money had become actively disadvantaged in some types of transactions that would have historically been very common to pay with the fanatic proposal, and the larger money amounts were in some suspected situations, due to its versatility and ease of use in money laundering and financing of terrorism. In addition, payment with a large amount of money was actively prohibited by some suppliers and retailers. [5] to the point of coining the expression of a "cash war." [6] The 2016 United States Consumer Research Study states that 75% of respondents preferred a rapid or hito card as their full payment, while only 11% of interviewees preferred money. [7] From the foundation of both companies in 2009, digital payments can now be made by mothers as Venmo and Square. Venmo allows individuals to make direct payments to other individuals without having access to money. Square is an innovation mainly small companies receive payments from their customers. In 2016, only about 2% of the value transacted in Sweden was cash, and only about 20% of retail retail they were in cash. Less than half of the bank branches in Pašš performed cash transactions. [2] The change of money is attributed to banks who convince employers to use directly in the 1960s, banks that charge for checks from the 1990s, banks that launch the convenient Swedish telephone smartphone payment system in 2012, and Izettle's launch for small traders to accept ranks in 2011. [2] Research among the first sociological studies on cashless societies, see Aldo Haesler, sociologie by L'Argent et Postmodernit© . Geneva & Paris 1995. Share of payments estimated payments made by mothers without money (from published studies 2008-2013) [8] [necessary update] 61 Low Paris 60 France 59 su. 8 Taiwan 6 Itš 6 a South Frca 6 Poly. For example, the nodic paanes lead more money without money than most other Europeans. Money in circulation can be broadcast widely between two pans with a similar measure of cashless transactions. In all 33 paans covered by the European End of Payment Cards 2015-16, the number of Mother of Payments per year per capita is 89.4. By comparison, the dane is 268.6 card payments each year, the mother 243.6, the island of 375.5, the Norwegian day 353.7, and the Swedish Dia 270.2 . [24] The Sweetgreen transaction speed restaurant chain has found cashless locations (with customers using payment cards or the chain mobile app) can process 15% faster transactions. [25] Elimination of high-denomination notes for purposes of reducing criminal activity a significant social advantage cited by the proponents is the difficulty of money laundering, tax denial, carrying out illegal transactions and financing illegal activities in a cashless society. [26] Many countries have regulated, restricted or banned private digital currencies, such as Bitcoin, partly for the prevention of illegal transactions. Large amounts of value can also be stored in real estate, antiques or goods such as diamonds, gold, silver and platinum. Some have proposed a "reduced money" system, where
